

St. John's Eltham

Hi Graham,

The service went very, very well last night, and everyone, without exception, was delighted with the lighting. Your guys have done a brilliant job, and we are looking forward to the choir reading desk lights to complete the picture.

I've spoken to the church wardens today, and it would be very useful if you could give us a rough idea of how much it would cost to replace the lighting in the nave and side aisles. Having seen the fittings in the chancel, the idea would be to go for some simple up and down lighters that won't detract from the architectural appearance of the church (which we all felt that the previous scheme that was proposed did do). I'm guessing a slightly smaller version of the fittings in the chancel? When you are next over this way, could we get together for 10 minutes and discuss? It would be the ideal time, whilst the effect of the new lighting is fresh in people's minds, and if the price is within our reach, we can put the idea forward at next month's PCC meeting.

Cheers, Francis
